

SUNNY NAUGHTON

Sunny Noelle Naughton is a nationally recognized facilitator, entrepreneur and experienced networker with over 20 years of presenting experience across the United States and New York City. With a background in human services, journalism and the entertainment business, and a Master Degree in Leadership, Naughton has followed her dreams through many industries.

Sunny has worked with greats such as Martin Charnin and Tommy Tune as well as having received a Community Outreach Award from both the Governor and State Health Director of Vermont in 2019. Most recently Sunny advised Governor Phil Scott on proclaiming May as Mental Health Awareness Month in Vermont.

Sunny thrives on leading people along to their story, and presenting oneself is a great place to begin. Who knows you better than you do? Start with what you know and dream from there!

DREW BUSH

The Assistant Director at the Old Stone House Museum & Historic Village, Dr. Drew Fulton Bush conducts research in McGill University's Department of Geography and collaborates with the Climate Consensus at Northern Vermont University, Lyndon. His research examines how geospatial data and technology can be coupled with hands-on inquiry and citizen science to educate young students and the public about Earth and environmental science.
